“Quality” offers of employment,
further education and training,
apprenticeship and traineeship

Content

1. Introduction

2. ILO Guidelines on “quality” offer of:

- Employment;
- Continued education(and training).
- Apprenticeship;
- Traineeship;

Introduction

- ✓ According to EC guidance a good quality offer is one that results in the sustainable integration into the labour market (outcome-based approach);
- ✓ Activation measures and occupations that have low rate of sustainable labour market integration are not considered quality offers;
- ✓ For continued education (and training), apprenticeship and traineeship offers, reference is also made to the Quality Framework for Traineeships (QFT) and of the Council Declaration on the European Alliance for Apprenticeships, whilst for education the European principles on quality assurance apply.

Introduction/2

- ✓ The ILO has developed a methodological approach to determine the elements that constitute a quality offer of employment and of continued education and training (including apprenticeship and traineeship) at the time the offer is made.
- ✓ The approach builds on the existing job quality frameworks and other international and European documents on quality education and training.
- ✓ The indicators are based on objective measures (i.e. they can be observed by a third party) and can be benchmarked against either statistical measures or normative texts.
